NEW! JGME News

Call for Resident Members of the JGME Editorial Board

[www.jgme.org] JGME is seeking a resident or fellow (past the first year of training) to serve as a resident member on its Editorial Board. Applicants are eligible from any specialty or subspecialty.
JGME:

- communicates new evidence about graduate medical education (GME);
- informs and engages the GME community to increase knowledge about teaching and learning; and,
- promotes scholarship and critical inquiry related to GME.

Qualified candidates should have:

- an interest in academic publishing;
- excellent writing skills and perhaps prior reviewing or editing experience;
- the time to handle assignments of up to two manuscripts at a time, up to one new manuscript a month, participate in two short conference calls per year, and attend an annual face-to-face editorial board meeting in the fall in Chicago, with travel funds provided (as your schedule permits); and,
- a program director who is aware and supports the resident's or fellow's participation in the JGME Editorial Board.

The term of appointment is two years, and candidates should have two years remaining in their residency or fellowship program. The appointment would begin immediately after selecting a qualified candidate. The JGME Editorial Board is made up of 30 medical educators and researchers, program directors, and designated institutional officials representing a range of institutions and specialties.

Candidates should email their CV and a brief letter of interest to jgme@acgme.org.
The deadline for receipt of nomination materials is Monday, March 9, 2020.