Application Deadline: Monday, December 30, 2021

The New York Academy of Medicine and the ACGME are pleased to announce the call for applications for the 2022-2024 Jeremiah A. BarondeSS Fellowship in the Clinical Transaction: Reinvigorating the Patient-Physician Relationship.

The Fellowship offers junior faculty members in internal medicine with a current university appointment the opportunity to develop innovative programs that enhance the fundamental elements of clinical care. This prestigious award includes funding of $50,000 over two years. Awardees will develop and implement programs that lead to significant enhancements in the areas of communicating with patients, conducting the physical examination, and applying clinical reasoning.

Eligibility

Applications are invited from medical schools, departments of medicine, and medical school-affiliated teaching hospitals with an approved internal medicine residency program in the United States. Faculty members based at a medical school-affiliated Veterans Administration hospital may also apply. Candidates should have exemplary clinical skills and a commitment to innovative teaching and training focused on the development of excellence in the clinical transaction, the elements of the patient-physician relationship. The Fellowship is for junior faculty members with a regular university/faculty appointment (e.g., assistant professors), with key responsibilities for developing, directing, and teaching in a robust, innovative clinical training program. Clinical fellows or senior residents in their last year of training may apply, but must have an early-career faculty position/university appointment at the start of the Fellowship funding period on July 1, 2022.

Additional Information

Applications must be submitted online through the New York Academy of Medicine. The Fellowship award will be presented at the 2022 ACGME Annual Educational Conference.
