

2020-2021 SEMCME Faculty Development Series 2

Registration Now Open

Self Directed Learning

three one-hour sessions presented by Gloria Aquino Sosa, PhD

November 20th, December 4th and December 11th

1-2 pm EST via zoom

The purpose of this series is to help participants in all medical fields understand their own learning style and gain techniques to assess and promote self-directed learning required to remain current in medical knowledge and treatment options.

After completing this series, participants will be able to:

- Identify their learning "practice" method - cramming, interleaving or varied (Brown, Roediger & McDaniel 2014) and determine if it needs to be altered
- Identify how to ascertain gaps in knowledge and list competencies necessary to fill gaps to learn
- Evaluate three effective tactics to advance/sustain self-directed strengths-based learning for high-levels of retrieval and retention of new learning
- Identify experiential biases that can alter self-directed learning
- Identify three areas of growth and which practice method
- Create lesson plans for sessions on self-directed learning strategies for medical residents
